From: Mrs. Scott

December 8, 2023

Third Grade News for the weeks of December 11-15 and 18-19, 2023

Reading: Next week we will finish up our self-created books based on the If You Give a Mouse a Cookie books. We will also spend the week splitting in to small groups to act out a short play. This will only be for our class to work on understanding the parts of a play and to practice reading with expression while doing actions.

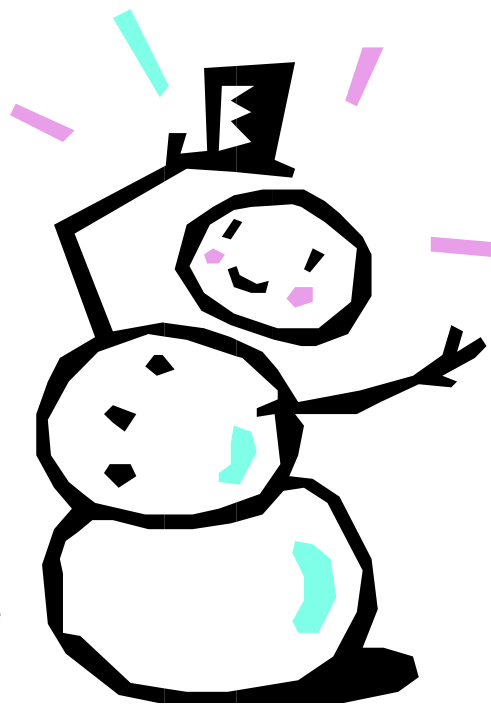

Math: We will continue chapter 3 working with adding and subtracting large numbers. We will conclude with a short test before the holiday break.

Social Studies: The students will be re-searching holiday celebrations celebrations around the world and working to create a powerpoint slide presentation that represents traditions, various flags, foods, and customs of places all over the globe.

Science: Unit 3 of Environments and Survival will continue as we learn about how animals survive in their environments and are dependent on certain factors of that environment to sustain survival.

Language Arts: Our literature set book, Jake Drake, will be completed by the holiday break. We will conclude the chapters with identifying likes and differences in character actions and inferring events of the story leading up to the end.

Have a very merry Christmas and a wonderful new year!
