Outlook for Next Week...

Reading: The beginning of our week will begin with continuing our current story, Destiny's Gift. We will continue to work on character traits using text proof to back up our reasoning. We will have our short quiz over the story on Monday and then begin our next unit by discussing types of bridges.

Math: Next week we continue to review our 5s, 2s, 9s, and 10s facts for multiplication and division. We will begin fluency on our 3s and 4s facts next. Everyone is doing a great job at learning their facts! It is important for them to be reviewing at home as well.

Science: We will continue Unit 1 by learning investigating balanced and unbalanced forces and explaining a bridge structure. We will be looking at our first test sometime the following week.

Social Studies: We have finished our first unit and will be moving onto the history of Missouri. We will be discussing Native American groups and will begin studying Lewis and Clark.

English: The students will continue their narrative writing pieces. We will be working on creating the plot of the narrative and how to create ideas that will keep the reader interested.

*If you haven't returned your child's progress report signed, please do so-I will then send it back to you after I look at any comments that you have made...thank you!

Special points of interest:

- New book report forms for October have been handed out and all point goals are due on Thursday, October 26th. This month will include AR points so your child has received a target goal based on their Star Test results that you received a few weeks ago. Please note that points awarded on AR quizzes are dependent on how well the student does on the questions. Partial points can be given. Each child has a note in their planner of their goal for the month. They can get an early start for October by taking quizzes next week that will count toward their October goals.
